

3. I think that red-black trees are computationally faster than AVL trees because although both trees are balanced, when more insertions and deletions are needed to be done, red-black trees would be faster since AVL trees have more rotations. Fewer rotations to balance the tree and overall height make the red-black tree computationally faster, however searching seems to be faster for the AVL trees.